Teacher of Modern Foreign Languages (French and Spanish)

Dear Applicant,

If you are reading this letter, firstly – thank you! I'm so pleased that our vacancy has piqued your interest. If after reading this letter and the various supporting documents you feel you have the skills and experiences to make a successful application, I urge you to apply.

Our school is a great place to work, with significant emphasis on Languages within our curriculum. We are research-engaged, and the Languages Faculty is involved in a number of different research projects. Our Head of Faculty has a clear vision about ensuring that Languages maintains strong regard – despite all the challenges that our current context brings. If successful, you will join a team of seven specialist teachers with a broad range of experience. The collegiate nature of our Languages team means you will be very welcome – either experienced or new to the profession - to contribute fully to the Languages experience at our school.

You will join a school where – unlike the majority in the country - all students study a language to GCSE. Unsurprisingly, our A-Level courses are popular with students, where we offer, Spanish and French. If successful, you'll have the opportunity to deliver our Intent, and to practice in line with our enriching ethos. Our Anglican heritage doesn't require you to be of any faith to join our staff team, but gives a great foundation for all that we do. Perhaps I can let our Outstanding SIAMS inspection report speak for us in this regard? 'Five deeply embedded, long established, Christian values, which are relevant to everyone, [create] an ethos in which harmonious and respectful relationships enable everyone to flourish'.

Our unrelenting focus is to develop the strongest professional expertise in teaching, learning and leading. CPD plays a crucial role in achieving this aim and you will find staff at all levels engaged in CPD and research – either delivering or participating - to hone their practice and provide the very best we can for the students entrusted to our care.

If you are currently training, you are very welcome to apply. We have a comprehensive package of support for our NQT colleagues and the MFL Faculty is experienced in providing excellent support.

So, if you like what you've read and heard about us, and believe you could make a positive contribution to the next chapter of MFL teaching at Bishop Stopford School, please make an application.

I look forward to hearing from you,

Warm regards

Jill Silverthorne
Headteacher
